

ARCHITECTOUR

(3 hours)

The Pritzker Prize jury notes that "during the last three decades, Eduardo Souto Moura has produced a body of work that is of our time but also has echoes of traditional architecture. His buildings have a unique ability to reconcile opposing characteristics, such as power and modesty, courage and subtlety". Souto Moura joins Siza Vieira (in 1992) among the world awarded with the "Nobel" of architecture. Our guides are enthusiastic and expert architects. Join us.
